Born from collaboration

We've continually refining our products through the feedback we get during visits with advisors. When we heard that their clients' investment data is the lifeblood of their business, we developed Portfolio Accounting and Reporting for Office Edition. It's a natural extension of what we do.

Driven by independence

While a lot of stock research includes things like quarterly earnings estimates, we search for evidence of a sustainable competitive advantage in the companies we cover. Sometimes that means we have a different point of view than the rest of the market, but that's okay with us.
